class racing. The Westchester meeting ends on Saturday and the kings and queens of the turf will go into retire ment to enjoy a well-earned rest. Most of them go to fine farms in Kentucky, New Jersey and other States, while Orleans and 'Frisco.

Racing will still go one at Aqueduci but the best horses will not be see there. The racing nevertheless will be ever before seen at Aquedast, because there are a dozen stakes to be raced for and these will call out oute a fair class of horses. Each of these stakes has $1,000, so that the actual value of the race is likely to run into $1,500 or more, and this is a sum not to be speczed at with a hard winter near at

The Jockey Club forced Aqueduct to give stakes. Otherwise the same old cheap selling platers would have per-formed there this full.

Stakes Figure $12,000.

Aqueduct has always been a momaker. Run on a cheap scale the profits They Don't Believe He Was The Public Has Perfect were enormous, and the association never gave away any more than neces compelled. While the stakes will cost $12,000 this amount will be more attraction is sure to increase the paying attendance at least 500 a day, which, at the $2-rate of admission, means $1.000.

Perhaps at Aqueduct racing may be more consistent than it has been at other tracks. If there is no improvement racing will go to the dogs. The profits will stand the game that has been dished up to them for a while, but not for long. It is all very well to have faith in the stewards and hope for action, but patience ceases to be a virtue after a time.

will stand the game that has been dished up to them for a while, but not for long. It is all very well to have faith in the stewards and hope for action, but patience ceases to be a virtual after a time.

One More Reversal.

Stewards are not severe enough. Little things escape their notice. For instance, Carbuncle ran twice at Westchester and ran very badly. On each occasion he was without blinkers on and though he did not win he showed a vastly improved race and had plenty of speed. When a horse does his best in blinkers he ought to be compelled to wear blinkers at all times. Wearing blinkers one day and running him without it the next. The stewards ought to here will send to the French racing of the charges made by the French officials and a strong movement is on foot among turfmen of standing, like Matty Corbett, to prevent Rose's being railronded.

Rose is heartbroken over the charges made against him. He stamps them as absolutely faise, and the fact that he has lost considerable money during the past three months there is ample evidence of his claim. Rose has not run any horses in France. His association, though, with the American racing crowd in Parls was what got him into trouble. The French officials here will send to the French racing officials a statement of Rose's standing.

It is understood that the turf officials here will send to the French racing officials a statement of Rose's standing. They should compel the paddock judge to keep a record of these things. At New Orleans and all Western tracks the paddock judges report to the tracks the paddock judges report to the stewards when a norse wears or does not wear blinkers, when he does or does not wear boots; when he does or does not wear heavy shoes. If the stewards at the Eastern tracks took notice of these things perhaps inconsistencies in form would cease.

It is the gossip of the track that one of the common ways of pulling off a good thing is to race a horse in heavy shoes several times, get weight off and then send him for the money, equipped in light racing plates.

Crack Western Colt Will Meet as

Racing Game's Handicap.

One thing that handicaps racing in East is the fact that there are half dozen men of wealth and influence ho dominate the sport. The trainers these men and their jockeys as a matter of fact can do as they please. Officials seem to fear incurring the dis-pleasure of these rich and powerful men. A paddock judge would hesitate if he cound that the trainer of a very prominent turfman was racing horses in shoes and then back to light plates.

wishes it were true, but the mainspring of racing is money and there is more money to be had out of the betting ring than from the purses offered by the associations. Hence the on and off days for blinkers, shoes and boots. There could be no racing without the public support. Hence it islands to reason that the stewards should in every way protect the public in its speculation on the horses. It is all bosh to say that betting is not recognized. Betting is the cement that holds the turf foundation firm and without betting that foundation would crumble away into dust. Clean racing means generous public support, larger purses and a general stimulation of the turf industry.

Access Still Great.

McGraw's worriment is evidence nough that the little manager has not een having everything his own way in securing the American League stars. It can be said, too, that he has trouble nough in signing the star members of the Giants of the past season.
